

Acknowledgements

This publication benefitted greatly from the research community fostered by the Cluster of Excellence “Temporal Communities: Doing Literature in a Global Perspective,” and emerged from our many formal and informal discussions with the colleagues, fellows, and guests who contributed to the Cluster and its research activities. We would like to express our deepest gratitude to Anita Traninger for her pivotal role in introducing the collaboration between Lindsey Drury and Nina Tolksdorf and for her unwavering support of the Workshop “What is the Digital Doing? A Workshop in the Interface.” We extend our sincere thanks to the Cluster of Excellence “Temporal Communities: Doing Literature in a Global Perspective” for their generous support and financing of both the workshop and this publication. We are deeply appreciative of the insightful contributions and respectful and generous discussions given by Marian Dörk, Alexander Galloway, Katherine Bode, Beatrice Gründler, Katrin Glinka, Johanna Drucker, Harmony Bench, Kate Elswit & Antonio Jimenez-Mavillard, and Jennifer Carolina Gómez Menjívar within the scope of the workshop as well as beyond it. Special thanks to Katherine Bode, Jennifer Carolina Gómez Menjívar, and Roberto Simanowski for their engagement with the project-in-development during their research fellowships at the Cluster of Excellence “Temporal Communities: Doing Literature in a Global Perspective”.

Our colleagues at Research Area 5 – especially Bart Soethaert and Jan-Erik Stange – contributed much important advice, time, and scholarly expertise to this publication.

Our special thanks go to Elvia Vasconcelos for her insights, sketchnotes, and artistic interventions at the workshop, for providing the insightful and enriching sketches for the publication, as well as for her critical engagement and feedback on the book publication project during her time as Dorothea Schlegel Artist in Residence at “Temporal Communities”. To Nada Ezzeldin the warmest thank you for designing a thought provoking and poignant layout, to Nils Schott for the extraordinary, careful, and painstaking translating the pivotal and odd text by François Dagognet, as well as the independent publisher deVrin for the rights.

We extend our gratitude, as well, to the team of Interface Critique, particularly Florian Hadler, Daniel Irrgang, and Alice Soiné for the publication of this special issue, as well as the team of the EXC 2020, especially Katja Heinrich, for leading the administrative team, and the student assistants for their generous support in administrative processes, workshop organisation and technical execution, especially to Lilly Welz and Carlotta Mickleit for leading the transcription process of the conversations. For financing the publication including the layout and the translation we thank the RA5 of the EXC 2020 and in particular Anita Traninger, Frank Fischer, and Bart Soethaert, for their crucial support.